

I think that the do-not call act enacted this year was a great idea for everyone. The reason I believe this is because i feel that telemarketers are a breach of privacy. There is nothing worse then having a telemarketer call your house at 9 o clock in the morning after you have been working 12 hour nights to only ask you a few stupid questions about something you don't want or you already have.I should know this because I was in training to be a telemarketer for a week but after I seen how telemarketers pressure people and annoy people so badly I couldn't continue on with my job. One example that always stuck in my head was when we were listening in on calls in the training room. The guy calls this lady and pressures her so much to give an answer to where her husband is that she finally breaks down and tells him that he is dead and that he just died the day before. To me this is to much. I feel that by issuing this Do-not call list you will have an enormous amount of people that sign up to be on it. People dont like smoking in restaurants and that is being banned in places and this will hurt the tobacco business. So why not put stricter rules on telemarketing it annoys people the same as cigarette smoking does. Thank You.
